COLLEGE DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL (CDC)

ABOUT CDC

College Development Council (CDC) was established in 1982. It has engaged in spreading the cause of higher education in colleges that come under the University's jurisdiction. CDC undertook a periodical survey of all colleges affiliated to the University. It has organized many conferences/seminars/workshops in collaboration with the postgraduate departments in order to streamline and strengthen the higher education system. Achieving ACCESS, EQUITY and QUALITY are the guiding principles of higher education today, and CDC plays a pivotal role in realizing these goals.

CDC is a policy-making body that engages with proper planning and integrated development of colleges. The main functions of CDC are to prepare a perspective plan for the development and opening of new colleges, implementation of University's policy on affiliation colleges, helping in the implementation of regulations framed by the UGC and their restructuring of courses at the undergraduate level. It also evaluates and assesses the impact of UGC grants utilized by colleges, granting affiliation to colleges according to University statutes as per UGC regulations, granting autonomy to colleges, encouraging colleges in getting Colleges with Potential for Excellence (CPE) status, approving the appointment of Teachers and Principals of private colleges, collecting and maintaining statistics pertaining to colleges and courses, assisting colleges in getting UGC grants and FDP's, promoting vocational and job-oriented courses in colleges, assisting colleges in all academic, administrative and infrastructural development, and encouraging colleges in their assessment and accreditation by NAAC.

CDC is a vital link between UGC, University, State Government and colleges in realizing the higher education goals and objectives.
