Mysore University Statutes for establishment of Sri Basaveshwara Research and Extension Centre for Social Reformation, 2011 (framed Under Section 29(2) (1), 34(6), (7) and (8) and 33(1) and (2) of the Karnataka State Universities' Act 2000).

Preamble and Justification

Sri Basaveshwara was a great thinker, social reformer and humanist who spearheaded a socio-economic, philosophical and religious movement in Karnataka in particular and South India in general during 12th Century A.D. by his thought provoking Vachanas (sayings) appealing to the sense of equality, compassion and work culture dormant in human nature. He revolted against of casteism, political instability, economic exploitation, gender injustice and blind beliefs. Because of the ideas of social reform, equality, simple devotion (bhakti marga), purity of soul and body, monotheism and hard work, Sri Basaveshwara is worshiped and held in great respect by common people. The new cult of Veerashaivism was born and flourished with great hopes and aspirations for socio-religious equality. Abandoning links with political power which he had held by virtue of being the Finance Minister of Bijjala, the Kalachuri Ruler, and dismantling the traditional beliefs and practices, he paved the new path that preached that work is worship and self-perfection is a basic obligation and built a team of similarly thinking Vachanakaras. Their simple, clear and popular Vachanas touched the heart and sensibility of people and brought a big transformation in their social and religious life. Ascendence towards moral perfection, equity, social inclusion and gender justice have been the philosophy underlying his Vachanas. The members of Anubhava Mantapa drawn from different walks of life and also from the marginalized sections of society supported Sri Basaveshwara's leadership for social change and reformation through intellectual re-awakening. Because of great social movement he is popularly recognized as 'Jagajyothi' (the light of the Universe) and 'Anna Basavanna' (the elder brother). His life, teaching and work have consistently and continuously influenced subsequent generations for centuries, sensitized the people from time to time and have a great relevance in 21st century.

The Vachanas contain eternal values of social and economic justice, wisdom of the ages, and morally elevating sublime thoughts. The thousands of Vachanas written by him and his contemporaries among whom there were over 35 women sharanas and a great amount of their visions have distinct religious, social and cultural background, which need to be studied through scientific research. The knowledge so earned need to be disseminated to the present generation and the future world. In the background of fall in values amidst the contemporary society, the need to restore the value system of Jagajyothi basaveshwara and his contemporary sharanas as reflected in the rich treasure of Vachanas, and thereby contribute towards social reformation can hardly be ignored.

The University of Mysore, all along its century-long social contribution to the knowledge system, has initiated new experiments and programmes in higher education to reach out to the masses and influence their thinking. With the purpose of establishing a Centre for research and extension on social reformation initiated by Sri Basaveshwara, the University approached the State Government of Karnataka for financial grant.
